Alex Shapiro: Narrative Overview

Here's a personal story about how the happy, sometimes haphazard, musical dots in my life became unexpectedly connected.

I was born in Manhattan in 1962. Growing up, I'd save the money I earned from babysitting to attend everything from opera, ballet, and classical concerts to jazz, rock, and alternative events in equally alternative venues around the city like CBGB's and Studio 54. It was fantastic to be a young musician in New York— especially in the 70's, when standing room tickets at the Metropolitan Opera were $3, and the jazz clubs never checked for I.D.

I started writing music at age nine, and piano lessons came soon after. With a tendency to improvise on my mistakes rather than correct them, what I lacked in a promising future as a concert soloist launched my life as a composer. At fifteen I began composition lessons, enrolling in the Mannes College of Music summer program and studying with Leo Edwards (1977), whose kindness was encouraging. I also took a class in electronic music, unaware how significant those skills would be in my future career. The following two summers (1978, 1979), I was the youngest composition student accepted to the Aspen Music School, and studied with Michael Czajkowski and George Tsontakis. It was at Aspen that I received my first paid commission: $500 for a brass quartet fanfare, featuring one of the worst tuba lines ever conceived. But the check cleared. I have been working steadily ever since.

In addition to master classes with Elliott Carter and Erich Leinsdorf, my summers at Aspen also had me participating in workshops with jazz greats Freddie Hubbard and Toshiko Akiyoshi, and getting to work on the Buchla synthesizer that Morton Subotnick lent his friend Michael Czajkowski for the summer. It was life-changing to be exposed to the professional worlds of classical, jazz, and electronic music while living in a rural setting where, for the first time in my life, I could see the night sky.

It was also at Aspen that I first learned the power of advocacy and activism. Hired at 17 as chorus manager for the world premiere of Peter Schat's opera, Houdini, I negotiated with the school's president to ensure every chorus member would be paid something for the unusually long rehearsal hours. The experience of speaking up on behalf of others and affecting change, no matter how modest (I think each singer got 50 bucks), was important. It set the tone for my adulthood, which has been as filled with community service as with new notes on the page.

My subsequent formal education was at The Juilliard School (1979-1980) as a composition student of Craig Shuler and Bruce Adolphe. Upon graduating the Pre-College Division, I began composition studies at Manhattan School of Music (1980-1983), studying with Ursula Mamlok and John Corigliano. While in school, I also worked in commercial music, scoring documentaries for local New York City cable TV and getting my feet wet in the jingle industry under Roy Eaton's tutelage. In 1983 I was hired to score a very, very low-budget documentary video in Los Angeles, and (with Corigliano's blessing on the heels of his experience scoring Altered States), I left school to begin my career composing film and TV music while fighting legendary traffic gridlock.

After fifteen years of writing music for mostly unmemorable projects, the joy I felt while composing a chamber orchestra score for a feature film, Horses and Champions, led me soon after to decide to shift my career back to concert music. It was 1996, and since leaving conservatory all those staff lines earlier, I had only composed soundtracks. I had no concert music catalog, and knew absolutely no one in the concert music world. But I loved chamber music, so flying in the face of, well... financial logic, I began writing the music I wanted to hear, found and created opportunities to get those pieces performed, and was lucky to have two early works recorded and commercially released. The combination of pursuing my passion, the advent of the internet, my geeky technical proclivities, my volunteerism with music service organizations, and a grasp of publishing– and, social– concepts from my film music background was fortuitous, and within a couple of years my music was suddenly being performed and recorded in many countries.

In 2007, with my career firmly anchored to my web presence, it dawned on me that I could conduct my music life from anywhere on the globe. Lured by a love of nature and the happy memories of composing in the woods at Aspen as a teenager and as a Fellow at The MacDowell Colony as an adult, I moved from the disquiet of Los Angeles to Washington State's San Juan Island, a serenely beautiful place devoid of bridges and traffic lights, floating next to the Canadian border. I've written nearly 200 concert works that are sold through a broad network of distributors, and all but two are published by my company, Activist Music LLC.

Until 2008 I wrote solely chamber music, until a wildly unexpected opportunity arose to compose for concert wind band. As other large wind ensemble commissions followed, I decided to pair my newfound love of the power of symphonic band with my lifelong love of combining instruments with prerecorded electronics. I've now composed more electroacoustic wind band pieces— many of which venture into multimedia— than any otherwise sane composer. In 2013, Hal Leonard Corporation signed what they called a “groundbreaking and pioneering” exclusive print and digital distribution deal with my company for these and other larger works.

I'm very fortunate to work full time writing, producing and publishing my music. When I'm not subjecting friends to insufferable puns on Facebook, I travel around the U.S. speaking at many universities and music events, and giving workshops for colleagues on behalf of ASCAP, for which I am the elected Symphonic & Concert writer member of its Board of Directors. I extol the magic of the web for creating a viable livelihood and genuine relationships, through thoughtful uses of social media and Skype which connect composers with musicians from around the world. I've testified before the FCC on the topic of digital rights, and have published articles about the new digital paradigm, and the philosophy of an abundant approach to a life in music. Quite significantly, I tout the importance and joy of volunteering one's efforts with service organizations, in the firm belief that when we help other artists, we help the arts.

Since moving to this remote, rural island, my career has never been busier. Just as in Aspen when I was sixteen, I'm composing music in a profoundly inspiring natural environment, only with better tuba lines. For this, and so much more, I am grateful. ❖❖❖
